It May Not Be Italy, But Holland is Nice

By Liz Lange, Administrator of Senior Services, City of Oak Harbor

Recently a woman shared how her life was like planning a wonderful trip to Italy. She spent years preparing for Italy, including packing for the climate in Italy, purchasing a ticket to Italy and boarding a plane to Italy. Upon landing, she was informed that she had instead arrived in Holland (Netherlands). While Holland is nice, it wasn’t where she had planned. Holed up in a small hotel room, she was frustrated. She had been looking forward to this trip, and now it was ruined. She was disappointed and angry, but she knew she had to make the most of her stay. She decided to focus on what being a recent widower and single dad of two young boys was wonderful. But she is gone. Knowing she couldn’t change that fact of life; he has ended up somewhere completely different in her life than she had planned.

Days after hearing her share this analogy I was talking with my brother-in-law, who just four months ago lost his wife Amy (my sister) to cancer at the young age of forty. He told me he is happy and looking forward to the future with hope and excitement. Of course, there are days the pain of losing Amy is so strong and present, just four months after her cancer diagnosis, that he finds it hard to believe she is gone. He acknowledged that their life together was wonderful. But Amy was gone. Knowing he couldn’t change that fact of life; he has decided to focus on what being a recent widower and single dad of two young boys would bring. He has found a way to embrace the challenge. He is buying new luggage to more easily travel solo with his boys, he is connecting with new people in similar life situations, he is making plans for the future.

We can all relate to this Italy/Holland anecdote of planning for a certain life and of course he wishes she was still here. He acknowledged that their life together was wonderful. But she is gone. Living with Technology

By Robin Bush
Gail Duttman and Community Education Director

Your neighbor tells you to get rid of the pretty wall calendar in your kitchen and keep your calendar on your phone. How? You have a virtual telemedicine appointment tomorrow. Where? The answer to so many things is “get an app for that.” What’s an app? Is it safe to sign up or buy things online? What about hackers, security, and privacy? And what about the whole new vocabulary out there? What’s WiFi, Bluetooth, live-streaming, or Google hangout? What’s phishing? Your nature is to be self-sufficient, so you search Google or YouTube for answers only to find tutorials that describe a different version of the software than you have, and what they say to click on isn’t on your screen. You end up frustrated and even more confused. And to top it all off, contacting “customer service” means an online chat or searching through a confusing list of “frequently asked questions.”

We are not alone in feeling overwhelmed. The world is changing quickly. Each day something new has moved from in-person to the internet, or new technology changes what you just learned. The winds of change are not a gentle breeze but rather a swirling twister sweeping up and into our powerful force. We all feel the pace. It wasn’t always this complicated. It wasn’t that long ago that my first computer had 8 Kilobytes of memory (not Gigs, Kilobytes)! It could store a few documents, I could type and make corrections and then print – no more carbon paper or white-out, and not much more complicated than an on/off button. Today, my newest computer has a 4-terabyte solid-state backup drive – about 4 trillion times larger than my old computer. It will store every picture I have ever taken (and that’s hundreds of thousands),
FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Two Steps Forward, One Step Back
By Cheryn Weiser, Executive Director Island Senior Resources

As we checked in with one another in a recent meeting of the ISR Leadership Team, we started by asking each of us what we were doing. One member acknowledged, “It feels like Ground Hog Day.” I left the meeting thinking there are probably a lot of us feeling that way; two steps forward and one step back as we navigate a vaccine availability, continued masking, and social distancing, and a late winter cold onslaught that brought us all up short. We feel a bit tested and maybe a bit testy!

Despite the deeply rooted feeling in our knowing we have been at this COVID ‘thing’ for a YEAR, the likelihood of increased access to vaccines and the inevitability of spring being around the corner will let us be outdoors more and should lighten our individual and collective emotional load.

I find myself thinking about what I miss most in this COVID time. For me, the formal and informal rituals of gathering together over a meal, over coffee, across the produce section at our local grocery store, or enjoying a birthday or holiday celebration with family and friends top my list. I’ve chosen to focus on the one thing I want to make sure happens when I am fully vaccinated, on a warm spring day – packing a lunch and meeting a friend or family member at a local park or another outdoor location, still socially distanced. I will carry this intention with me until I make it happen. I allow myself a little smile as I imagine what that treasured sequence of events will feel like. And, on the other side, I will set a new goal that will bring similar deep satisfaction and a sense of normalcy.

By spring, we may not yet be able to enjoy that special hug from a dear friend or family member, but there are ways to expand our repertoire from our more cloistered existence. So, dream a little. Imagine that warm spring day. What will you be doing?

IMPOSTERS EVERYWHERE
By Tony Lally, Consumer Education and Training Director (360) 678-3373

In an imposter scam, someone pretends to be someone else for the purpose of getting your personal and/or financial information. This was the number one reported scam category in 2019, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

ANYBODY CAN PRETEND TO BE ANYBODY

A scammer can pretend to be from a government agency, like the IRS, a business, such as Bank of America, or a family member or friend. Scammers are even pretending to be a loved interest on social media and dating websites.

TELL-TALE SIGNS OF A SCAM:

1. The government agency or business asks for sensitive information over the phone, text, or email.

2. They contact you through sensitive information they should already have.

3. They ask you to wire money or send it via an untraceable manner, such as Money Pak/Green Dot cards.

4. Someone you don’t know well asks you for money.

STEPS TO FOLLOW TO AVOID IMPOSTER SCAMS

1. Don’t be rushed, pressured, or make a decision in a panic. Scammers try to scare you, so you act without thinking things through.

2. Verify you are communicating with who you think you are. Don’t just respond to the number in the email, voicemail, or text. Look up the correct number in the phone book, on your bill, or online. I am sad to report scammers are now setting up imposter websites, so you want to make sure you contact the legitimate business or government agency if you look it up online.

3. Be very judicious when you provide personal and/or financial information. Do not provide this over text or email.

4. Do not wire money as it’s an untraceable manner.

5. Don’t loan money to people you don’t know well. If you decide to loan someone money, even someone you know, make a contract and make sure you have that person’s name, address, and contact information.

For more information, there are helpful videos and resources at www.Senior-MoneyProject.org and www.CENTSProgram.org.

CENTS is a nonprofit organization dedicated to empowering people to improve their financial health by developing educational and legal resources to help prevent or overcome financial challenges. Their Senior Money project is a free consumer education program for seniors.

Building a Practice of Mindfulness

By Betsy Griffin, LMHC, Island County Human Services

Regular practice of mindfulness has been linked to improved cognitive function, improved physical health, and improved mental health.

What is mindfulness? Jon Kabat-Zinn, founder of MBSR (mindfulness-based stress reduction), defines it as: “Mindfulness means paying attention in a particular way: on purpose, in the present moment, and non-judgmentally.”

Let’s try a few DIY mindful activities. Find a space where you can be minimally interrupted for five minutes. Sit comfortably or lay down. If it feels comfortable, close your eyes.

Breathing mindfulness. Inhale a slow deep breath, followed by a slower exhale. Continue your focus on the sensations of your breath. Follow the path of air and sensations that arise. Feel the change of your chest and diaphragm as your breath moves in and out. When you feel your mind drift, bring your attention back to your breath.

Body Scan. Begin with a minute of focus on breathing with slow deep breaths and building connection to your body. Bring your focus to your toes, starting with your big toe and slowly moving one by one. Attend to any sensation (temperature, contact with clothing). Continue moving your attention around your feet, heels, and ankles. Check for any tension, and release any effort on the exhale. Continue slowly scanning your legs, knees, and thighs. Attend to any tension. If you come across any discomfort, recognize it without judgment. Continue to your hips, your stomach, your back. Pause to take another slow deep breath and release it with a slow exhale. Continue with shoulders, down arms, elbows, forearms, wrists, hands, and fingers. Check in with all sensations of feeling like air passing over hands or arms resting. Return your attention to your shoulders, then to your neck, face, jaw, and brow. Again, attend to any tensions and pause to breathe and release. Now bring attention to your whole body. Bring awareness to your energy and the sensation of calm.

Mindful eating. Pace this activity to last for at least 5 minutes. Find a bite of something delightful - a piece of fruit or a bite of chocolate. We’ll use a grape today in this description. Begin with a moment of breathing. Pick up the grape and feel the weight of it. Feel the texture and the sensation of flavors as you do. Prepare to swallow, attending to the feeling of the grape moving along. Pause and think of how this moment feels and any lingering flavors. If you’d like to explore guided mindfulness, there are great technology supports. Smiling Mind is a web and app-based program that offers a multitude of mindfulness activities for a range of ages (free). Calm is an app that offers many options of mindfulness activities, some led by celebrities, for a variety of focuses (free/premium). Insight timer has guided meditations, mindful courses, music, and more (free/premium). 10% happier is a great podcast that explores ideas of mindfulness and hosts leaders in the field of mindfulness (free/premium). There are great books as well. Jon Kabat-Zinn’s books are in a number of formats in Sno-Isle libraries. Enjoy your moments of pause and mindfulness.

2,021 Miles to Go

By Sonney Wolfe, Accountability, City of Oak Harbor

I joined this club where each member runs 2,021 miles in 2021. That’s an average of about 5.62 miles a day, or 365 consecutive days. In an attempt to downplay the gravity of my commitment, I rationalized that I only needed to maintain around 39 miles a week, and somehow this sounded better, like I might be able to give myself a break, or a day off, or a glass of wine on a Friday night. I’m currently 117 miles behind, and some recalculations are in order.

March seems to do that to me every year, demand recalculations. I’ve long fallen off my resolution wagon, but I’m not giving up. If I want Sundays off, I need to average 7 miles per day. It’s daunting. even to me, and I can run forever without tiring. But I’m moving forward on two premises here, both were motives of my late husband, Jay.

“First and foremost,” he would say while staring down some impossible feat. “The hardest part about achieving anything is deciding to do it.”

“And second,” he would say with a grin I’ll never forget, “There’s only one way to eat an elephant, one bite at a time.”

There was no mountain too tall for Jay, no canyon too deep. Nothing was impossible for that man. He saw obstacles not as barriers, but as challenges, moments for him to think creatively and navigate some new puzzle, and he enjoyed the process.

I feel blessed to have these memories of him, to carry them with me through every COVID-19 situation, every feat that lands before me, every new challenge I decide to conquer. I’ve had to learn how to zoom, how to pay bills differently, how to teach classes online. My old job let me go due to COVID cutbacks, and I had to find a new job, in a new field. My children are troubleshooting online high school and college. The list goes on, and it’s easier to feel defeated.

The world is nothing but one challenge after the next right now, and I’m 117 miles behind my goal of 2,021 miles, but I’ve done some recalculating. I’ve decided to conquer this, and I’m going to do exactly what Jay would have done – eat this elephant, one bite at a time.

Sonney Wolfe is a freelance writer who lives in Oak Harbor, Wash. She’s been published in the Record Searchlight, placer Herald, Press Tribune, Suter 101, Totsy.com, The Canyon Weekly, Island Times, and various others. She taught English at a few colleges in Oregon and currently works as an accounting assistant for the City of Oak Harbor Finance department. In her free time, she enjoys hiking with her kids, snuggling her grandson, and running 43 miles a week like a crazy woman.

Member Spotlight: Sylvia Sotelo

Sylvia Sotelo is a true Pacific Northwest gal who grew up in Kirkland, Washington and has seemed to keep finding her way back to Whidbey Island. In the 1970’s Sylvia and her sister lived on the island and owned “Stuff and Such” for about 8 years. Their store was located where the Seaside Spa and Salon in Coupeville is currently located. They sold items like house plants, antiques, and locally hand-crafted gifts. Together the two of them also did many arts and craft shows. After her sister moved to Florida they would even do art and craft shows down there in the winter and then shows on Whidbey Island in the summer. Sylvia participated in the Coupeville Festival for many years and the Issaquah Salmon Days for around 18 years.

Around 8 years ago, Sylvia decided it was time to return to Whidbey Island and partake in a new business venture. She had an idea of running a bed and breakfast type of business and had always thought that would be fun along with providing some additional income. She looked for two years all over the island for a place to call home and use as a vacation rental. Sylvia felt like she had a tie to Coupeville from having grown up there in ‘70s so when the “Float on Inn” became available she knew she couldn’t pass it up. The house is located right in Coupeville and offers beautiful views of the water. It has a separate upstairs living area with one bedroom, a private bathroom area with a fridge and microwave and an outdoor deck that looks out over the water. She uses this space as a vacation rental using sites like Airbnb and VRBO. Sylvia mentioned how she had made people from all over the United States, Canada, and even England stay at her home. Sylvia said, “I started doing this when I was 75 and it was a new adventure and a new career, but I thought why not?” She does all the work herself and mentioned how she feels it keeps her young. Sylvia didn’t want her age to stop her from fulfilling a dream of running a vacation home. As someone with a long-time tie to the Island she said, “I feel very fortunate to live on the Island and I love the small-town feeling.”

One of her most treasured things in life is her two daughters and four grandchildren. One of her daughters lives locally in Renton and her other daughter lives in Southern California. It was a huge priority of Sylvia’s to be a part of her grandchildren’s lives so she would make frequent trips off Island to Renton and fly down to Southern California to visit. Unfortunately, the past year Sylvia hasn’t gotten to visit due to COVID but once it is safe to do so again, she is ready to see her family.

Sylvia got involved at The Center a few years back when she was looking for an exercise class to join and found EnhanceFitness. She has great self-motivation, even though it isn’t always easy, and attends 90-100% of the classes most months. The thing that gets her going is attending 90-100% of the classes most months. The thing that gets her going is always looking to the future and having a positive outlook on life. Sylvia is someone who always appreciates what she has and helps brighten the lives of those around her. She is an inspiration for all of us and we are very fortunate to have her as a member in our community and at The Center.

HAIKUS

Sylvia Float Inn

In last months issue of Island Times there was an article asking for Haiku submissions and here are the submissions we received:

“Whidbey Island, our beautiful home. Cradle and Cherish it!" - Jennifer Abermanis

“The Center stands still. Your laughter, smiles, presence will return again.” - Liz Lange

Dusk approaching, still
The world aglow, gentle light
Peace, golden hour” - Alcita P.

AGING MASTERY PROGRAM STARTS MARCH 9

March 9 – April 20

The Center in Oak Harbor is proud to partner with the National Council on Aging to offer you the Aging Mastery Starter Kit. The Starter Kit will inspire you to take steps toward positive gain across six dimensions and help you build your own playbook for aging well. Each dimension has specific goals, personal values, or actions, you are encouraged to incorporate in your daily life. Each week will have a RingCentral (powered by Zoom) meeting with the group and a guest speaker to discuss the chapter and apply what we have learned. You can join the meeting by either calling in or using a device to connect to the video chat. This is a great time to make new connections, engage in lifelong learning, and start to master aging well.

FREE BOOK TABLE

Every Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. outside the front door of The Center with free books, magazines and puzzles. Please feel free to take as many as you would like, and feel free to leave a few when you are finished with them. The book table will continue through the winter but may not be out on days of inclement weather.

THE CENTER IS NOW A RENEW ACTIVE SITE

Reneu Active with UnitedHealthcare

The Center is excited to announce that in partnership with UnitedHealthcare we are now a Reneu Active site which means with most UnitedHealthcare Medicare plans, you can participate in our group exercise classes including EnhanceFitness and Yoga at no cost. If you think you are eligible, please contact Carly Larson at clarson@oakharbor.org or 360-279-4583 for more information.

VIRTUAL ENHANCE FITNESS AND YOGA CLASS

Virtual EnhanceFitness is offered Mon - Wed, Weddays and Fridays from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Virtual Yoga with Maria is offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. The cost is $25 month for members and $30 for non-members or the drop-in rate is for $5 members/$7 for non-members per class. Silver & Fit and some Kaiser and United Health Care insurance plans will reimburse the cost. Please inquire with Carly Larson, 360-279-4583. If you believe you have an eligible insurance plan. To sign up for either EnhanceFitness or Yoga, please call us at 360-279-4580. We can take payment over the phone, by mail, or arrange a drop off time. Once you have enrolled in the class and signed the waiver, we will email you the login information.
